NACo: Apply now! Initiative to support rural county residents with substance use disorders

NACo and partners at Bureau of Justice Assistance, CDC, and State Justice Institute are excited to announce a new initiative, Reaching Rural: Advancing Collaborative Solutions. The initiative empowers rural practitioners to build networks, adopt solutions and reimagine how diverse systems can engage to serve justice-involved individuals with substance use or co-occurring disorders. To apply, click here to access the Reaching Rural application. Applications are due Sept. 30.

Opioid Response Network kicks off support for counties with Aug. 31 webinar

NACo has partnered with the Opioid Response Network to connect counties with free, on-demand technical assistance to support substance use disorder prevention, treatment and recovery. Join us Aug. 31 to learn how the Opioid Response Network is supporting local communities and how your county can use this resource. Register here.

Monsoon Awareness and Flash Floods

Summer thunderstorms are often associated with intense rainfall over a brief time period, producing more water than the ground can absorb. Fast moving and rapidly rising water can result, often in areas that are normally dry. These events are referred to as flash floods.

Flash floods usually occur within six hours of heavy rainfall and are normally the most dangerous of floods. They can occur with little or no warning, move at very fast speeds and can reach a peak in a few minutes. The power of flood waters can easily move rocks, tear out trees, and sweep away cars and trucks. A foot of water will cause vehicles to float, and two feet of rushing water can easily carry away most vehicles. Most flood deaths are due to flash floods, and most fatalities occur in vehicles.

From Hidalgo County to Carlsbad Caverns, from Taos County to Mora County, and to McKinley County and more. It can happen anywhere. Turn Around, Don't Drown
