

Emergency Response Information

To help better prepare for the upcoming fire and flood season, here are some rural resources that can assist in the overall preparation for disasters and provide a better understanding on what steps should take place when a disaster happens. Page six of the webpage called How to Request Assistance for Emergency Preparedness and Response would be good to save as a bookmark, so you have a quick guide to emergency response steps. Also, there are a Damage Assessment Operations Manual and case studies of different types of disasters that model community response efforts.
